

Tree surveys for golf courses

Woodlands and trees feature heavily on many golf courses, providing many aesthetic and ecological benefits as well as creating interest and challenges for golfers of all levels.

NUMEROUS ENVIRONMENTAL AND LEGAL OBLIGATIONS EXIST WHICH REQUIRE THAT THE MANAGEMENT OF THE ASSETS IS COMPLIANT WITH UK LEGISLATION AND GUIDANCE, TO PROTECT EMPLOYEES, THE PUBLIC AND OF COURSE THE LOCAL ENVIRONMENT.

Whilst the number of injuries from falling trees or branches is annually very low in the United Kingdom, the potential repercussions for a landowner can be quite severe in terms of risk to insurance cover, reputation and potential loss of business through adverse publicity.

Legal action taken by injured parties has illustrated how a duty of care lies with the landowners, and that it is their responsibility to have in place a planned tree management strategy, managed by people with an established level of competency in this area. Indeed a number of high profile court cases over recent years have highlighted the need for a minimum qualification standard for all tree inspectors.

It is also the landowner's obligation to ensure that every worker on their site is qualified to the relevant competency level for their operations.

Do you currently?

- Have trees managed in a risk assessment system that would indemnify you if an accident occurred?
- Have a long-term management strategy in place?
- Know how to assess the experience of your current tree contractors?

If you answer no to any of these, your current strategy could mean that you are exposed. However, a few simple steps can ensure that you are well covered.

Pinnacle Environment Ltd can provide an efficient and effective strategy for tree, landscape and wildlife management to provide you with peace of mind and a proactive approach to land management.
